Trust Him when your strength is small;
Trust Him when to simply trust Him
Is the hardest thing of all.*

WORSHIP IS

...sitting at His feet hanging onto His every word.
...gazing up into His tender eyes with a long and loving look.
...hungering in His presence for the last ray of the sunlight of His love 'ere we close our eyes in sleep.
...the heart awakening at the voice of the Beloved and straining to catch every accent.
...watching for every opportunity to slip away and commune with the Lover of our souls.
...breathing out praise and thanksgiving unto the glory of His grace as poured into His blessed lips.
...Reflecting back into our eyes the lovelight of the Beloved.
...skipping to meet the Beloved after hours of separation.
...tuning the strings of our heart to sing His praise.
...basking in the sunlight of His love, folded in the arms of His protection and loving watch care.
...perking up the ears whenever anyone talks about Him.
...seeking kindred spirits with whom to share the joys of the Beloved.
...clinging to every word and letter from the absent Lover, that fills our hearts with longing for Him.
...changing us into the image of Christ.
...meditating upon the Altogether Lovely One.
...drinking in the Living Water that lifts the drooping heart.
...desiring ever and always His will and His way.
...offering ourselves to the King who admires His beauty upon us, and rejoicing in what His grace has done in preparing our hearts for Him.
...delighting in the companionship of the One we love, which molds us into His image.
